

UBIQUITOUS ARTS

EVALUATION | TRAINING | CONSULTATION | PROJECT MANAGEMENT

'Supporting people who work to support others'

Now more than ever is a time for reflection on how we can support and safeguard ourselves and those we work with whether they are colleagues, audiences or participants.

Ubiquitous Arts are offering the following online courses specially tailored to the arts, culture and heritage sectors:

- SAFEGUARDING
- MENTAL HEALTH FIRST AID

We understand that in this difficult time and many freelancers and organisations are struggling to find the time and resources to engage with development opportunities but the long-term benefits of training with us are well worth your very competitive short term investment.

Sessions delivered in an efficient, timely manner - have your qualification with a single am/pm session with flexible assessment times

Valuable networking opportunities with creatives from across the UK and resources to takaway afterwards

Fully interactive sessions making the most of the technology while being user friendly and reliable

Relaxed sessions delivered via Zoom with an experienced, qualified industry professional, with follow up support available

Book: www.eventbrite.co.uk/o/ubiquitous-arts-30714797016

Website: www.ubiqarts.org

Email: lesley@ubiqarts.org

"Over the last 3 years I have worked with Lesley in various ways, both as an artist delivering to students undertaking Arts Award and as an independent evaluator assessing the impact of an ongoing project taking place in our school. Her invaluable contribution has helped to shape both the ongoing project and our schools Artsmark journey."

Rachel Benson (Director of Specialism)
Collingwood Media Arts College

"The MHFA course was really great value, both in terms of my time and money. I felt connected to the tutor and other participants during the online session and the resources and interactivity were really thought provoking and I feel they have made my practice more confident, safe and inclusive in a way that complemented my own lived experience without being triggering or patronising."

(Freelancer and mental health survivor working in media and community wellbeing)

Ubiquitous Arts Director Lesley Wood is a creative and educational professional with more than 20 years' in depth experience of working across the creative, heritage, education and cultural sectors. Lesley brings a 360 approach to her work linking theory, sector guidance and practical hands on experience and knowledge to support others in developing their practice.

Lesley has written in depth about a range of issues relevant to education, heritage, culture and arts, including the recent blog 'Online safeguarding for creative practitioners, organisations & professionals during Covid 19: The Seven P's of Online Safeguarding' which explores the importance of safeguarding awareness for freelance creatives, practitioners and professionals.

Read more here: www.ubiarts.org/blog

Special rates available for block bookings, limited bursaries for freelancers on low incomes

Course content can flexible to your needs

" I really enjoyed learning this new skill. I am excited to keep learning and growing with this. I feel like this should be shared with every business in the UK whatever stage they are at. Lesley was very knowledgeable & was great at putting me at ease during the assessment and preparing me for it. I am happy to see that Mental Health is being taken this seriously." (MHFA Course Attendee)

UBIQUITOUS ARTS

EVALUATION | TRAINING | CONSULTATION | PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Book: www.eventbrite.co.uk/o/ubiquitous-arts-30714797016

Website: www.ubiarts.org

Email: lesley@ubiarts.org

@UbiLesley